

Joan Deppa

Professor, S. I. Newhouse School of Public Communications

Professor Deppa teaches courses in news writing, reporting, critical perspectives on news, communicating with computers (interactive multimedia), electronic publishing (print and websites), and computer-assisted investigative reporting. She is the principal author of The Media and Disasters: Pan Am 103, and has a strong interest in ethical issues relating to journalism, including international media ethics. She enjoys long walks in the woods, reading mysteries and exploring cool Web sites.

