

Erin Dozier

Associate, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP

Erin L. Dozier is an attorney in the FCC & Communications practice at Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton LLP in Washington, D.C. Her practice involves representation of satellite television providers, broadcasters, and equipment manufacturers before the Federal Communications Commission and other governmental entities. Ms. Dozier also advises wireless companies, video programmers, and publishers on legislative and regulatory matters affecting their services.

Before joining Sheppard Mullin, Ms. Dozier worked at the FCC, where she most recently served as Special Advisor to the Chief of the FCC's Media Bureau. She was extensively involved in the FCC's development of regulation and policy governing competition among media outlets through rulemaking proceedings and transaction reviews. She participated in FCC review of several significant media transactions including Comcast-AT&T, News Corp.-DirecTV, and Time Warner/Comcast-Adelphia. While at the FCC, Ms. Dozier also was detailed to the office of former Chairman Michael Powell, where she was involved in FCC actions governing consumer electronics equipment and the transition to digital television.

Ms. Dozier began her legal career at Akin Gump Strauss Hauer & Feld, LLP, where she represented a broad range of communications service providers in regulatory policy and compliance matters before the FCC. Ms. Dozier serves on the adjunct faculty of Catholic University's Columbus School of Law. She is a graduate of Georgetown University Law Center (J.D.) and Hampshire College (B.A.), and is a member of the Connecticut and District of Columbia Bars.
